AFTER THE AFFAIR

Life, sex and love, post cheating.

All relationships can't be happy all the time. Sometimes we do things to one another for which we are sorry. Not sorry enough to stop, perhaps, but sorry enough to apologize.

One way in which a situation like this can be resolved is by turning the nastiness into effective sexual stimulation, which can be a major turn-on for everyone concerned. Therapists, concerned by the distressingly high divorce rates in recent years, have increasingly pointed to one source for many marital break-ups: cheating.

Fewer and fewer marriage partners, it sometimes seems, are able to remain faithful to their mates. And more and more are getting caught. Most experts on love and marriage agree that it is extremely difficult for a couple to remain faithful to one another over a long period of time in today's sex-crazy world.

With attractive potential sex partners available everywhere one goes, it can be difficult to toe the straight-and-narrow line of traditional marriage without feeling that you're missing out on something. Almost inevitably, usually within two years or less of marriage, many couples begin having affairs outside the home.

At first it may be nothing more serious than a quick afternoon fuck with a stranger, followed by extreme feelings of guilt on the part of the adulterous partner—feelings that are sometimes strong enough so that the cheating will never be repeated.

Sometimes cheating with various strange partners becomes a habit, and then it is almost impossible to remain undetected. Sooner or later, the cheating partner is found out, and more often than not the marriage falls apart as a result.

There are times, of course, when someone who is married falls hopelessly in love with someone else, and then the only thing to do is get divorced. But that is not the subject of this article.

Instead, the focus is on a radical method of handling cheating which many therapists now feel cannot only save the relationship, but strengthens it.

Most therapists—in fact, most anyone who has had any experience with marriage—has come to the conclusion that honesty in a marriage is the best policy. Without honesty, the whole structure eventually collapses, and divorce is the inevitable result.

Until recently, honesty as far as adultery was concerned has meant admitting it if you have had an affair. This usually means a highly charged emotional scene

Most therapists has come to the conclusion that honesty in a marriage is the best policy.

in which the guilty partner begins by saying, "Honey, I have a confession to make..." and then proceeds to admit that he or she has been guilty of the terrible crime of cheating; feels horrible about it; and hopes to be forgiven.

'I've had sex with so-and-so and it was great.' They wanted to give, and did give, a very explicit blow-by-blow description of the action.

This is usually followed by anger, tears, screaming, demands to know when, why and with whom, threats of divorce (often carried out), and so forth.

If couples survive the first act of cheating, they often reach a kind of uncomfortable 'semi-marriage' in which there can be further acts of cheating, often as retaliation for the original act of infidelity, further scenes, and much more emotional agony.

Some very few mature couples manage to get past the cheating and to keep on loving one another, partly by pretending that their partners really are faithful. This is an ostrich-like act which can save a marriage, but which certainly does not do anything to make it better.

What many therapists are doing is taking a page from the playbook of the suburban wife-swapper. The therapists sex lives at home, not in the wild weekend trysts with the neighbor's spouse.

"What we found about the swingers," says one marriage counselor, "was that they could hardly wait to get home to tell their partner what they had done after they'd been in bed with someone else. And I don't mean that they just wanted to say 'I've had sex with so-and-so and it was great.' They wanted to give, and did give, a very explicit blow-by-blow description of the action.

"The whole idea of it was to turn on their partner. You go home and say to your husband, 'Well, first I took Jerry's clothes off, and then I stripped and let him watch me, and then I climbed into bed with him and took his cock into my mouth until he was hard as a rock... and then he slipped it into my pussy bit by bit...' and so forth. And all the time the wife is talking, the husband is rubbing himself into a frenzy, getting ready for the heavy fucking he knows they're going to have—probably as she gets into the juicier part of the description."

It has been mentioned here before that frank sex talk is very much a part of a complete sexual experience for any couple. This includes open discussion of what is desired and what is disliked in the way of technique, and it has been proven that the explicit expression of sex fantasies during screwing can do a great deal to heighten the pleasure of lovemaking.

But experts in the field now often suggest that married couples (or couples who are only living together) use complete explicit description as a therapeutic technique to counter the possible negative effects on a marriage of any extramarital affair.

"What you're doing in essence," says another therapist, "is turning it around so that the extramarital affair benefits the marriage rather than negatively affects it."

What it comes down to is this: the thing you're trying to deal with and overcome is jealousy. Now jealousy operates best in a vacuum. The less one realized that part of the kick from swapping partners was telling your partner what you had done when you went home.

The therapists suspected that the satisfaction many couples received from the mate exchange came in the boost to their knows about the extramarital sex one's partner indulges in, the more one imagines, and the more one's mind is tortured by jealous feelings. On the other hand, when you're offered an explicit description of what went on, you tend to be more able to demystify it and accept it as a perfectly natural and not terribly important event.

Now let's take this one step further. Suppose that in the process of listening to what happened when your mate stepped out on you, you find yourself getting turned on. Suddenly, you realize that all this is terribly exciting to you. The truth is that most people are very excited when they hear about their partners banging someone else. For one thing, it makes you feel that your partner is attractive and enticing to someone else. For another, you have such a precise and intimate knowledge of your partner's body and their way of having sex that, when you are told how it was with someone else, you can easily picture exactly what went on.

The war between jealousy and sexual excitement is almost always won by sexual excitement and more often than not, telling the tale leads to heated fucking with your partner. In most cases, jealousy will still rear its ugly head from time to time and, in a fit of pique, the one who had first accepted the cheating may get angry or sulk about it. But the emotional storm that will follow is usually small and easily smoothed out.

When couples stumble on cheating accidentally though, and when they don't know precisely what happened, then the discovery all too often leads directly to a breakup or divorce.

"My feeling is that divorce is really used to excess in our society," says one LA-based therapist. "People turn to divorce as an out from minor problems when they don't really need it. A perfectly compatible couple will decide to get a divorce because one or the other is screwing around, when at home they're a hundred per cent content.

"To prevent this, I think, one of the best techniques is an absolutely frank and total confession. Before recommending this to a specific couple, I would want to know the people involved. It is very possible that someone could overreact, that some individual would just not be the type to bear this type of confession. Obviously, I am positing a certain amount of sexual sophistication on the part of both partners.

"But in most cases, I feel, it's simply better to have it all out in the open. After all, if people are going to make a decision about something as important as breaking up a marriage or relationship, they ought at least to have all the facts on hand.

"Further, in three out of four cases, when all the facts are known the couple will decide not to break up. Yes, it is certainly possible that the description of the sex acts in which they have indulged will give a boost to their own sex lives. It might even be recommended for couples who have been married five years or longer and find that their marital lives are sagging, that they just aren't as sexually heated as they used to be."

Of course, to explicitly confess the kind of affair you've been having takes some courage and sophistication. It also

I was fucking him, I knew that I would have to go home and tell my husband all about it, be-

takes courage for the partner who has been cheated on to admit that he or she is more excited by the revelation than angered. But it can be done—and most serious therapists feel it's the best way to avoid a break-up over adultery.

"In talking about affairs, there is an additional possibility besides heightening your sexual pleasure and not wrecking the first time in my life.

"I was free from having to lie and pretend. I was free to be myself and be honest about it. No one is really cut out to devote their entire lives to one other person. None of us feels really good when we're living a lie. We don't feel good with our own consciences.

"Well, my husband doesn't really get your marriage," says a strong advocate of open marriage. "When you discuss things like that, you get this terrific sense of freedom, as if you're shaking off all these bonds that you've always felt on yourself.

"Two years ago I had an affair with a man much older than myself. Even while I was fucking him, I knew that I would have to go home and tell my husband all about it, because that's just the way I am.

"I was frightened, of course, and I knew that I was taking a chance that he might explode on me, that he might walk out on me or all kinds of things, but I just had to go through with it.

"And as I talked, telling him every single thing I'd done with that guy, how I had bent over a table and let him lift my skirt and push his dick inside me, and how we'd done it in a chair and a car and so forth, I felt really liberated, maybe for all that turned on by hearing about my affairs, but he prefers for me to tell him, and he does not get angry. And it makes me feel like a better, freer woman."

Talking about affairs, really, is just one step toward dealing with cheating. A truly open sexuality has the advantage of leaving one with a free conscience, and enhancing the sex act itself.

Countless partners can describe how they were excited beyond their wildest dreams by having sex while one partner was telling the other about a sex experience with someone else. Such open confessions can heat up any relationship.

And they can, in the right place and at the right time, do a great deal to bring a couple closer together. The only hurdle which must be overcome is that of jealousy. Once you've put jealousy behind you and learned to talk about your affairs, then you're home free.

PHOENIX MARIE

Phoenix got something really special for her birthday – a night with Alec. He showed up just on time. She had adorned her gorgeous body with her newly favorite lingerie. She had gone to the mall earlier in the day and picked it out just for tonight. Of course, it did not stay on for very long once he got there. Soon she had his pants off and his cock in her mouth. We think it's going to be one heck of a birthday – for both of them.

KITTY CAULFIELD

A fiery redhead is just the thing that we can't get enough of. Kitty started by talking about what it took to get her all fired up. She tells us how she loves to have her pussy played with and was happy to show us firsthand. After that got out of the way, she demonstrated her blowjob skills! Kitty could not help but play with her perky tits as she sucked his cock. Then we watched some more as her pussy swallowed it.

Gabby and I had been arguing about it all morning. She thought I was crazy to get another bike, crazy to even think about riding again.

"Damn," I said, turning the motorcycle helmet this way and that. "Talk about a lifesaver . . ."

Its plastic shell had cracked upon impact, cracked like an egg. Better than my head, of course.

Last night's crash had been a doozy. I was lucky to be alive. Some nut in an SUV had run a redlight and clipped my rear wheel, sending me crashing to the pavement. The fucker had kept on going. Hit and run. As for me—well, I had declined medical treatment, telling the paramedics that I was just fine. And I was. Not a scratch. A walking miracle. The paramedics couldn't believe it. "You're one lucky bastard," the taller of the two had told me.

Now, well rested after eight hours of sleep, I sat at the breakfast table drinking coffee and inspecting the helmet which had saved my life. Ruined. Just like my bike. The former was no biggie. The latter, a pill of the bitterest sort.

The bike had been my pride and joy, setting me back a pretty penny and worth every hard-earned red cent.

Totaled . . .

A diehard biker, I had every intention of buying a new one. A life without the wind in my hair was no life at all. My girlfriend had other ideas. Gabby and I had been arguing about it all morning. She thought I was crazy to get another bike, crazy to even think about riding again. "Don't tempt fate, Frankie," she had said to me. "Next time you won't be so lucky." "There won't be a next time," I had told her. "Last night was a freak accident." Our exchange had grown increasingly heated until Gabby, having reached the boiling point, grabbed her purse and slammed the door on her way out.

I wasn't worried. She would be back. Gabby always came back. And, if history served, she would be hornier than ever and dying for some hot make-up sex.

I wasn't surprised in the least when I heard her pull into the driveway. My coffee had gone cold. I got up for a refill when Gabby rushed inside.

"Feeling better?" I asked her.

"I swear, Frankie, you're the most hardheaded sonofabitch I've ever known."

"But you love me anyway." Leaning against the counter, I peered at her over the rim of my mug, winking as the hot brew cut a trail to my gut.

"Yeah, I love you. Don't know why—"

"I know why," I said, setting my mug on the countertop.

"Oh, boy." Gabby rolled her eyes. "I can't wait to hear this."

I didn't say a word. We had talked all damned morning. I was tired of my own voice, tired of Gabby's . . .

I lowered my boxer shorts to mid-thigh. Her gaze met my stiffening cock. She grinned naughtily.

"For me?" she remarked with faux surprise.

Gabby knew damn well it was for her. Dispensing with the innocent act, she crouched on the floor and proceeded to wow me with her topnotch oral skills. My girlfriend's talented lips and tongue never sarcastically. "Yes, the helmet!"

Kinky. I liked it, especially so soon after my accident and the argument that had followed. I placed the helmet on my head and secured its chinstrap. Still peering at me over her shoulder, Gabby grinned lewdly and told me to stick it in.

I lifted the hem of her lightweight summer dress, exposing that beautiful bum of hers. Gabby's was a big ass, big and white and impossibly plush. Lowering her purple cotton panties with one hand, I pushed her legs apart with my knee, opening her for a good and proper poking.

She sighed when I pushed inside her, turning her head to look at the tabletop still cluttered with her empty cereal bowl and coffee mug. Sinking my fingers into her ample hips, I thrust slowly yet deeply, feeding her every inch of my stiff tool.

"Oh, yeah, baby," Gabby uttered. "Your big cock feels so good inside my tight little pussy . . ."

Her words of encouragement prompted me to up the pace; it wasn't long before I was hammering her with frenzied failed to thrill and amaze . . .

She lifted my shaft with one hand, exposing its underside which she licked several times before taking me in her mouth. Gabby pumped her head mechanically, polishing my pole with increasing speed. I moaned, marveling as her moist lips, cinched snugly around my dick, glided back and forth.

Having serviced me to the brink of orgasm, Gabby withdrew and led me to the breakfast table. She leaned over its surface, her forearms just inches from my helmet.

"Put it on," she said over her shoulder, "and fuck me."

"The helmet?" I asked, taken aback by her request.

"No, the salt and pepper shakers," she replied jabs. Her bountiful ass jiggled and warbled as I fucked her from behind.

I must've looked ridiculous, screwing her like that with my helmet on, boxers stretched between my knees. Not that I gave a damn. Gabby had asked for it. Who was I to deny her?

Mine was a powerful orgasm; I pulsed and spasmed, filling Gabby's juicy box with hot spunk. I remained inside her for a minute or two before pulling out. A single rivulet of cum oozed from her pink gash.

"Did you come?" I asked her.

With Gabby, it was often hard to tell.

"Twice," she replied, rising from the tabletop only to kneel before me. She cleaned my cock with her eager mouth, savoring her cunt juices while giving me one serious case of helmet head!
